EYEON GROUP AB (publ): Launches Advanced Defense Tech Product – Strengthens Offering to National Security Agencies

Eyeon Group is now introducing a new Defense Tech solution that enables national security authorities to access valuable data from the dark web. The product is the result of over ten years of collecting leaks and information from around the world – data that today serves as a powerful tool in the fight against organized crime, cyber threats, and other serious threats to society.

The launch marks a strategic step in Eyeon's long-term commitment to the security sector. Through the acquisition of Safestate in March, Eyeon has also added significant specialist expertise. Safestate's CEO, Daniel Fyhr, has over ten years of experience working with government agencies and security solutions.

"Sweden's total defense is not built solely by government authorities and the military – it also includes the civil sector, where we already contribute to the resilience of the business community through our services. With my background in both the Armed Forces and the Police, it feels good to be able to direct our capabilities toward the defense sector as well. With our technical capacity and specialist knowledge, we can offer concrete value in a situation where the threat landscape facing Sweden is rapidly evolving," says Daniel Fyhr, CEO of Safestate AB.

"We live in a time where access to the right data is crucial for preventing and investigating crime. Since we own our own data, we can offer unique value to security actors. This product is a concrete step in our strategy to become a leading player in Defense Tech," says Fredrik Björklund, CEO of Eyeon Group AB.

The product will be launched on the market in April 2025 and is aimed at government agencies with critical societal missions, including defense, police, and other security organizations.
