ADVENTURE BOX: MULTIMAKER LAUNCH POSTPONED UNTIL Q122

Intensive development work is currently underway to make the new game form "Multimaker" so good that a successive launch can begin in the next quarter.

The development work with the "Multimaker", the new form of gaming that allows users to create games together, is now in a testing phase. During the autumn, the Multimaker was tested by users on various mobile phone models. The focus is on user-friendliness and functionality. Views on how the Multimaker can be further improved have been received from the users who have tested the product. The development work will continue in parallel with further testing and even after gradual launch improvements will be continuously implemented based on the responses we receive.

"We consider it very important that the Multimaker, when gradually opened up to everyone on our platform, works well enough on different mobile phone models and is easy to understand for our users. We are not yet satisfied and will continue a gradual transition from testing to launch in the coming quarter," said Rickard Riblom, CEO of Adventure Box.
