Safestate Group AB (publ): SafeState Partners with Telenor to make Digital Safety Standard for their Mobile Subscribers

Safestate Group AB (publ): SafeState Partners with Telenor to make Digital Safety Standard for their Mobile Subscribers

Dark Web Monitoring now bundled as standard in Telenor's new Sikre subscription, available across mobile and broadband in Norway.

Telenor Norway is making a clear statement about how it treats its customers: digital safety comes included. Starting today, every new subscriber joining through Telenor's new Sikre package automatically gets SafeState Group's Dark Web Monitoring built in, and with Sikre as the focus of all commercial efforts across every channel, it's set to become the home for the vast majority of new Telenor customers.

Rather than leaving customers to sort out their own digital protection, Telenor is taking responsibility, making proactive identity monitoring a standard part of the experience. Sikre puts security first, subscribers choose protection as the foundation, then add mobile and/or broadband on top.

SafeState's platform continuously scans underground forums, data leak repositories, and compromised credential networks. When a subscriber's personal data is found exposed, they're alerted in real time, before criminals can act on it.

Daan Donders, CEO of SafeState: "This is what a real partnership looks like. Telenor doesn't just sell connectivity, they take responsibility for their customers' digital safety. Every new subscriber is protected from day one, automatically. And for SafeState, deals like this are how we're scaling fast across Europe."

Cybersecurity shouldn't be a premium. Telenor and SafeState are proving it doesn't have to be.
