

Qbrick Signs New Enterprise Client in Germany

Qbrick AB (publ), a leading platform for video and AI based communication, has signed an agreement with a new enterprise client in Germany. The agreement covers access to Qbrick's video platform and extends over 12 months. This agreement marks an important step in Qbrick's re-entry onto the German market and supports the company's overall European growth strategy.

Qbrick has previously served customers in Germany, and this new agreement represents a renewed and more focused market approach, built on an evolved platform and a strengthened enterprise offering.

Earlier this year, Qbrick communicated increased interest from enterprise customers across Europe. The newly signed German client confirms this momentum and demonstrates Qbrick's ability to convert European demand into signed enterprise agreements.

Qbrick's platform is built to meet enterprise-grade requirements, with high security standards and robust data protection measures. This is a critical factor for large organizations, particularly in markets such as Germany where security, compliance, and reliability are essential decision criteria.

Krister Karjalainen, CEO of Qbrick AB, comments:

"This agreement confirms that our strategy and execution are aligned, and that our enterprise offering meets the requirements of large international organizations."
